

Capaciti Networks Update

December 20, 2013

Dear CCI Shareholders,

I wanted to let you know about three exciting developments in our wholly owned subsidiary, Capaciti Networks, which we have completed this week.

The first, is the re-launch of the Capaciti Networks' site, which was primarily designed to support the "Bid for Better Broadband" initiative. If you'll remember from the last letter, the "Bid for Better Broadband" program is designed to let business owners name their own price and pick their own plans for carrier-class broadband. We believe this marketing concept could be very powerful and even industry-disruptive because it introduces an active marketplace for non-SLA broadband services. The site is located at www.capacitinetworks.com.

In addition to the re-launch of the website, Capaciti has also gone live with its "street level" Wi-Fi program in the Central Business District of Columbus, OH. Our high-speed networks there are recording amazing speeds: over 100 Mbps to a smart phone and well over 200 Mbps to a laptop. We are very proud of the speed records we're setting on Capaciti's Wi-Fi network and it speaks to the quality of our design and proprietary technology as well as the technical acumen of the architect behind it, Chief Technical Officer (CTO) Bob Merola.

The pay-for-use Capaciti Wi-Fi is now connected with global Wi-Fi giants Boingo and iPass. Between them they have more than 2,000,000 hotspots around the globe. This was made possible through our OSS (Operations Support Systems) Contract with Pronto Networks.

Also, to help introduce our new commercial Wi-Fi program we are now offering the people of Columbus 30 minutes of free Wi-Fi until December 31, 2013 on our high-speed network in the Central Business District. Not only will that help citizens and visitors save valuable data limits on their mobile phone plans, but it will offer potential customers a taste of our blazing speeds and reliability.

All of this information has been released to the press through nationwide services.

Remember that you can always find more information about CCI via our website at www.cci-us.com.

Sincerely,

William H. Gray
